Science without fiction

ink’s,” she said. “Our new report highlights the isolation of older men.
Poor physical and mental health is much more likely to happen when older men are isolated because of their own family members.

He said there was a greater problem of loneliness in our busy lives.
He latest report found in 2018 that 1.2 million men in the UK aged 65 or older reported feeling a sense of loneliness.

Lone men (23% of all men) saw their children more than once a month.

Dr Zara Gladman of Glasgow Science Festival and Dr Maurizio Filippone of Glasgow University are among those who will delve into the science behind movies.

BOSS: Duar Fleming was said to have “shot from the hip”.

The judge ruled Mr Garbett, who now works for the Scottish Environment Protection Agency, was constructively dismissed and awarded him £22,611. The Glasgow-based firm was told to pay his fees of £1,200.

A spokesperson for Envirocentre said the changing nature of employment around Glasgow means that small firms are at risk of being left behind.

The rapidly declining sea population at the Firth of Tay and Eden Estuary Special Area of Conservation is predicted to become locally extinct in less than 10 years, said WDC.

They are part of a bigger national population whose status is ‘unfavourable, inadequate’. The dramatic decline of this population and the failure of the Scottish Government to maintain the population at a sustainable level of conservation status is a continuing breach of European environmental legislation.

“The Scottish Government does not have a clear strategy to reverse this decline,”

RSPB Scotland has already raised the development of wind farms off the coast of Scotland and the Tay will contribute to the local communities.

The Scottish Government says the wind farm would provide enough energy to power more than 1.4 million homes.

Energy Minister Fergus Ewing said the developments would have to meet strict rules on protecting the local environment.